EXCEPTIONAL TEACHING & LEARNING IN HISTORY

"The HMCI has been critical of school leaders who, she suggests, 'prioritise a narrow range of subjects at the expense of delivering a broad and rich curriculum' ... This concern is filtering into more inspection reports".

BACKGROUND TO THE TRAINING & DEVELOPMENT PACKAGE

What makes teaching and learning in history truly exceptional?

Inspirational, engaging and interactive approaches to the teaching of history through the use of artefacts, pictures and other historical sources. The afternoon focusses on a determination to develop historical thinking at every opportunity, inside and outside of the classroom.

The course has been specifically designed to start at 1pm to support your school to release you at minimum cost to the school budget and class contact time. The session will include a 'Riding Forward Afternoon Tea' for delegates.

OUTLINE OF THE TRAINING & DEVELOPMENT PACKAGE

The training package will look at how to develop the skills of young historians with practical ways to develop enquiry and historic questions, careful observation and critical judgement of evidence.

Through observing 'real teaching', discussion and practical examples, delegates will be inspired in how to achieve an engaging, interactive approach to the teaching of history.

Opportunities will include a focus on creative learning experiences which will engage children in interactive methods, which can be adopted and adapted for different age groups or themes, whilst ensuring progression and challenge for all.
