FOCUS OF THE TRAINING

During this fun, no nonsense, interactive, jargon free and challenging training, delegates will be provided with a tool kit of strategies that can be implemented the very next day to de-escalate any inappropriate behaviour quickly, effectively and in a non-confrontational manner.

The bottom line is that OFSTED see low level disruption as a problem. They estimate that pupils lose at least 1 hour a day and 38 days within the academic year due to low level disruption. Teachers are also concerned with behaviour. In a recent study 75% teachers said they have to deal with a violent incident.

Part 1 - During this fun, down to earth, no-nonsense, jargon free and interactive session, delegates will be provided with a whole toolkit of simple, practical and realistic strategies that can be implemented the very next day in their own practice to de-escalate and diffuse any low level and inappropriate behaviour quickly, effectively and non-confrontationally.

Part 2 - During this very interactive session delegates will be provided with a complete range of practical ideas to prevent any low level inappropriate behaviour occurring in the first place and creating a positive climate for learning. Staff will also be equipped and empowered to implement the key principles of developing outstanding behaviour, including rules, routines, relationships, rewards, engagement, effective teaching and learning and assessment, positive parental involvement, presence, assertiveness, confidence and consistency.

The heart of the sessions focus on delegates looking at their own practice and behaviour to effectively manage and motivate pupils.
